NOTES.—Recruited under the second call for troops, leaving New Hampshire on September 11, 1862. After two weeks drill on Arlington Heights, Va., it joined General McClellan's Army (Oct. 4th) then at Harper's Ferry, and was brigaded with General Ferrero's command, Sturgis's (2d) Division, Ninth Corps. The Eleventh saw its first battle at Fredericksburg, December 13, 1862, where it behaved with extraordinary gallantry, its conduct receiving universal commendation. Its losses on that day were 19 killed, 151 wounded, and 25 missing ; total, 195. The Ninth Corps passed the greater part of 1863 in Kentucky, Tennessee, and Mississippi. Before going to the West, there was a month's preparatory stay at Newport News, Va., which with the time spent in Kentucky was the pleasantest period in the existence of the regiment. It was a time of blue skies, green fields, comfortable quarters, good food, and pleasant journeys by land and water. The Eleventh participated, without loss, in the investment of Vicksburg, but in the following siege operations at Jackson, Miss., it lost 1 killed, and 12 wounded. It was also engaged in the Siege of Knoxville, Tenn., in November, 1863, a campaign notable for its hardships and privations. Leaving Tennessee in April, 1864, the regiment rejoined the Army of the Potomac (Griffin's Brigade, Potter's Division). Lieutenant Colonel Moses N. Collins was killed at the Wilderness ; the regiment was engaged at the Petersburg Mine with a loss of 9 killed, 32 wounded, and 22 missing ; and in all the subsequent battles of the corps, adding to its reputation for hard fighting and heavy losses.

* With the recruits are included 409 conscripts or mercenaries who deserted and never joined the regiment.
